What of the football gridiron as a training camp for citizens?

We have mentioned several times the value of the training received there as being of considerable importance in meeting the problems of the business world. Now comes Fielding H. "Hurry Up" You, director of athletics and football coach at the University of Michigan, with a few words on the subject. He points out that the loyalty and real service learned on the gridiron, if applied to real life, would result in almost an ideal state. He would have the same principles applied to the national life, to commerce, politics and government. You speak on the subject was made in New York. Here is what he says on it:

"I believe that if the nation were so imbued with the spirit of the college football players and true to the sense of loyalty and real service which his thoughts and actions are treated we should have the almost perfect state."

"Loyalty and real service—they are the watchwords of the college football players."

"I should like to see one day the principles of football fully applied to all phases of national life, to commerce and politics and to government. I believe that if the nation were so imbued with the spirit of the college football players and true to the sense of loyalty and real service which his thoughts and actions are treated we should have the almost perfect state."

The spirit of football regards an opponent as a rival, but not as an enemy. It abhors subtlety and teaches all things of questionable fairness. The country may learn lessons from the gridiron which will be of priceless worth in their application to the routine relations of the people of one another and to their government."

Coach Hugo Bezdek, coach of Penn State, is putting his "Nittany" Lion thru stiff workouts at Pasadena, Cal., this week in preparation for meeting University of Southern California, in that place New Year's day in the annual East versus West Tournament of Roses football classic. There will be little letup in the practice work for the contest. Bezdek has announced. It is to be one of the big intersectional contests of the year, and always attracts a lot of attention in the football world.

Another contest which will hold some interest for the fans is the game between Pittsburgh University and Cornell University, at Ithaca, N. Y., also to be played New Year's day.

Both of the eastern teams in these games are being given the edge. Most writers are giving Pittsburgh an easy victory over Stanford, and Southern California and Penn State due to battle to a rather close score, with the easterners having the edge.

WIDOW PERISHES IN FIRE

Home Burns When Curtain Comes in Contact With Candle.

Tilton, N. H., Dec. 29.—For many years Mrs. Sarah P. Comerford, 83, an invalid, has lived alone in a tiny farm house near here and to assure her friendly neighbors that she was safe thru the watches of the night, it has been her custom to keep a light burning in the front window. Last night the window was left open a trifle, blowing a curtain to the flaming lamp, setting the house afire, the helpless widow perishing in the flames.

FARMERS' UNION MEETING

Annual Convention Will Be Held in Topeka January 24 to 27.

The annual convention of the Kansas Farmers' Union, to be held in Topeka January 24 to 27, will hold an special attraction for the membership thru-out the state this year in that for the first time in the state's history a member of the Farmers' Union will occupy the chair of governor—Jonathan M. Davis. The governor-elect will address the convention and if his executive duties permit, will probably attend some of the sessions. The legislature will be in session at the time of the convention. With many critical problems affecting agriculture to discuss, the importance of the convention is stressed in the call issued at Farmers' Union headquarters, Salina. It says: "The convention will be a much more important gathering than any political meeting ever assembled in the capital. Every Farmers' Union local in Kansas is entitled to representation and every incorporated Farmers' Union co-operative business is entitled to representation and should have its delegates there." In case funds are not available for the delegates' expenses the call urges: "Give a pie party or pass around a subscription list." Business associations may appropriate money for a delegate's expenses and should do so.
